Commentary

In December, the Norte Long Bias fund posted a negative return of -3.57%, outperforming the Ibovespa, which recorded losses of -4.28%, underperforming the benchmark, which delivered a return of 1.12%. Among the strategies, the largest contribution came from the hedge, which softened the decline, followed by the short portfolio, then by pairs, and finally the macro book, which gained from relative value trades in currencies. The main detractor was the long book. From a sectoral perspective, domestic growth incurred the largest losses, driven by retail and home builders. Defensive domestic sectors lost primarily in health and fuel distribution. Commodities and financials recorded similar losses, while utilities were negatively impacted by sanitation. Lastly, the global book experienced marginal losses.
